

The diagram, labeled G-52, illustrates a circuit board layout. It features a central multi-pin connector with six horizontal lines extending from it. To the right, a vertical line of ten small circles represents a component or connector. At the bottom right, two large circular components are connected to the main circuit. The layout is enclosed in a rectangular frame with rounded corners.